Will Your HIS System Satisfy Your Goals? New IT Assessment Case Study from Inteck, Inc.

DENVER, COLORADO, April 18, 2006 — Inteck, an information technology (IT) consulting firm for the healthcare industry, has written a case study which describes how it helped a community hospital obtain an HIS to meet its long-term goals.

Less than four years after the implementation of a Healthcare Information System (HIS), this community hospital was concerned that the system would not meet its future business goals. Prior to Inteck's involvement, hospital management was aware that its staff was not satisfied with the capabilities of the system, or with the vendor. One of the hospital's goals are to move to a paperless environment within three to five years.

This hospital engaged Inteck, Inc. to conduct an assessment of their HIS. The purpose of this evaluation was to assess the effectiveness of the HIS to meet current and future organizational needs as well as to identify risks to the organization. Management wanted to insure that the staffs' dissatisfaction was not due to its staff not being trained properly, or because the staff was not using the system properly

This case study discusses the business environment and challenges facing the hospital, Inteck's process of evaluation and analysis, and how this community hospital benefited. For a no cost copy of the full case study please visit: www.inteck-inc.com/itassesscs.htm
